Occupational Profile of Graduates

Our graduates, with the title of biologists, can work in R&D departments in many fields of industry, as well as medicine, food, environment and agriculture, as researchers who will support the development of humanity with their scientific studies, and as successful experts needed by the sector. In addition, due to the research-oriented structure of our department, they can advance academically in similar fields and work as R&D managers/scientists in the research units of academicians or companies.
