Program Information

The period of regular education for the Associate Degree Program in Justice is two years. During this period, students are given face-to-face training and internships in the judicial institutions. Students were taught the basic concept of law and the methodology of law. As a requirement of the philosophy of modern law, they are expected to adopt indispensable principles such as democracy, secularism, the rule of law and separation of powers. In addition to these, they must reach the consciousness of honesty, justice and ethics which are sought in all officials performing their judicial duties.
